

SEIBERT HOUSE WAS RANSACKED

Vernon Avenue Residence
Looted in Family's Absence.

LIGHTED FROM TOP TO BOTTOM

NEIGHBORS THOUGHT THE OCCU-PANTS HAD RETURNED.

So Did Adam Faust, the Caretaker,
Who Found Everything in Disorder—Valises Scattered in Vacant Lots Furnish Principal Clue.

Discovery was made Saturday morning that the residence of Ex-capt. James M. Seibert, at 5181 Vernon avenue, had been entered by burglars and ransacked from top to bottom, the family being absent.

Mr. Seibert and his family are in New York. Before he went away Mr. Seibert engaged Adam Faust as caretaker for his house.

Last Friday night at 12 o'clock Faust passed by the house, he says, and saw that it was brilliantly lighted, even to the attic. He supposed that Mr. Seibert's family had returned on an evening train and were engaged in setting the house to rights before retiring.

Faust, desiring to see Mr. Seibert on business, returned to the residence early Saturday morning and was surprised to find no one at home.

He entered the house and was still more surprised to find everything topsy-turvy. From cellar to attic the furniture had been moved about, drawers had been opened and their contents strewn upon the floor, and even the library books had been taken from the shelves and thrown about.

NEIGHBORS HEARD NOISE.

The next-door neighbors, being questioned as to suspicious signs in the Seibert home, remembered that during Friday night they had heard a good deal of noise in the house and had remarked concerning it. They, like the caretaker, supposed that the Seiberts had returned.

A woman who lives on Wells avenue, near the suburban tracks, saw Saturday morning several valises in a vacant lot adjoining her house. She went out and found that they were empty. One of them bore the name "J. M. Seibert."

In the absence of the Seiberts it is impossible to estimate the amount of goods stolen from the house.

The police are working on the clues furnished, particularly the ones in which the empty valises figure.

MANILA GAMBLER A QUITTER

United States Supreme Court May Pass on His Debts Incurred at Monte.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The fame of Ramon Gomez Ricoy as a gambler has for years been heralded throughout the Philippine archipelago. One night Ricoy played monte with Lucio Angeles and not only lost his cash, but signed a check for $2,000.

When Angeles sought to collect on the paper Ricoy refused to sign the obligation. He was arrested on a warrant alleging embezzlement.

The trial of Ricoy interested all Manila. The court dismissed him, holding that no one could be held liable for his gambling debts. Twice more was he arrested, and his lawyer drew a brief tending to show that an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States should be granted in case the Supreme Court of the Philippines renders an opinion adverse to Ricoy.

NICOLAUS ON WAY HOME

Millionaire Brewer, Indicted for Bribery, Will Arrive in New York Wednesday.

Henry Nicolaus, the well-known St. Louis brewer, indicted for bribery, is expected to arrive in New York from Germany on the Kron-Prins Wilhelm on Wednesday, according to his attorney, former Gov. Chas. P. Johnson. Adolphus Busch, his bondsman in the sum of $50,000 for his appearance for trial here, is supposed to be on the steamer with him.

If he leaves New York Saturday morning he will arrive in St. Louis in time for the trial, which is set for Tuesday. It is charged that Nicolaus, as director of the Suburban Railway, signed the notes on which the $125,000 used to bribe the members of the old Council and House to pass the Suburban bill was raised. The defense of Mr. Nicolaus will be, it is said, that he did not know what purpose the money was to be used.

FAMOUS NOVELIST ZOLA FOUND DEAD IN HIS HOUSE

Champion of Capt. Dreyfus and the Man Who Forced the French Government to Grant a Revision of the Case.

DIED OF ASPHYXIA BY FUMES FROM COAL STOVE

EMILE ZOLA.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—Emile Zola, the eminent novelist and champion of Capt. Dreyfus, was today found dead in his house from asphyxiation by fumes from a coal stove.

Zola returned to his Paris home from his country house at Medan, and owing to a sudden spell of cold weather here, he ordered the heating stove in his bedroom lighted. The stove burned badly, and Zola and his wife retired at 10 o'clock last night and the servants, not hearing any movement in the apartment this morning, entered the bedroom at 9:30 and found Mme. Zola lying on the bed, inanimate.

Zola was lying half out of bed, with his head and shoulders on the floor and his legs on the bed. Doctors were summoned but they failed to return Zola to life. After prolonged efforts they resuscitated Mme. Zola.

A rumor suggesting suicide from poison was based on the fact that Zola had been supposed to have come from his stomach were found on the floor, but the doctors say they came from Zola's dog, which was in the bedroom and which did not suffer from asphyxiation.

Zola dined with a good appetite yesterday evening and the servants of the household ate of the same dishes. Nothing unusual was heard in the bedroom during the night.

Some workmen arrived at the Zola residence at 9:30 this morning in order to make repairs in Zola's bedroom. Nothing unusual was heard in the bedroom during the night. The servants, having already become alarmed at the odor, entered the room, de-locked the door and burst the door open. A slight odor of carbolic gas was at once noticed and the bodies of the novelist and his wife were found in the positions already described.

Zola had evidently been awakened by a choking sensation, tried to rise, but was overcome by the fumes, which apparently escaped from the defective stove. The windows were immediately opened, doctors and a commissary of police were summoned, and the utmost efforts were made to revive the novelist and his wife, but they were in vain.

Mme. Zola regained consciousness about noon. She lay in a state of complete prostration. An improvement in her condition is anxiously awaited in order to obtain further light on the occurrence.

A druggist, who was the first to arrive at the Zola residence, said that when he entered the bedroom Mr. Zola was partly lying on the floor and appeared to be in a state of asphyxiation. He was then distinguished by the two victims, more or less, did not present any symptoms of asphyxiation. Their faces were contorted and their lips were bloodless, but not violet colored.

CHAMPION OF DREYFUS.
Zola had won fame by his writings before the advent of the Dreyfus case, but as the champion of the condemned and exiled French officer he attracted the attention of the world and forced the French government to reopen the case and grant Dreyfus a new trial.

Dreyfus, on Devil's Island, condemned to a life of solitary confinement for a crime he did not commit, excited the sympathy of Zola. He became active in the agitation for the revision of the sentence under which the military court degraded the artillery captain, he maintained vigorously the French army, accusing them of being traitors, of concealing a conspiracy to rid the staff of Dreyfus for the single reason that he was a Jew.

"I ACCUSE," SAID ZOLA.
He printed in L'Aurore a letter, which elicited France in a series of terse sentences. Each sentence began with the words "I accuse" (I accuse), and each sentence accused specifically a man whose name was given of an act in the case of Dreyfus. The agitation increased at once and the government was compelled to recall Dreyfus for a new trial.

Dreyfus was not declared innocent at the trial, but was pardoned at its conclusion and Zola was placed upon trial for his attacks upon the army. He was charged with a month's imprisonment and a fine of 300 francs. The verdict was quashed by the court of appeals, in the meantime he was expelled from the Legion of Honor. He fled to France when the verdict was rendered and remained in Belgium until the verdict had been quashed.

THE TRIAL OF ZOLA.
The trial of Zola was the most remarkable scene ever witnessed even in a French court, where the procedure is unlike that of the tribunals of any other civilized land.

Arrests the Porter.

Mrs. J. O. Campbell of Springfield, Mo., was robbed of a chamela bag containing $1500 worth of diamonds, while she was stopping at the Hotel Berlin, Taylor and Berlin avenues, Sunday night.

Henry Harris Green, a colored porter, was arrested Monday morning by Sergt. Sullivan of the Eighth district, and when the negro's room was searched the missing gems were found. Harris was locked up pending the issuance of a warrant, which will be applied for.

Mrs. Campbell is the wife of a high official of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Co., and was stopping in this city for only a day of rest before continuing a journey from an eastern point to her home in Springfield. When she left her room for a short time she placed her jewelry in a little sack, but when she looked for it she was unable to find it.

She could not recall where she had placed it, and thought possibly she had dropped it while walking from her apartment, but a thorough search of the house failed to reveal its hiding place. Becoming alarmed, Mrs. Campbell finally reported the matter to the police, and Sergt. Sullivan was de- tailed on the case.

He looked about the premises and at last arrested Harris. The negro protested his innocence, but the officer insisted upon searching the porter's room. In a few moments the diamonds were located and identified by Mrs. Campbell as her property.

Harris was taken to the police station and a warrant will be requested Monday afternoon. The diamonds were returned to Mrs. Campbell.

Dr. Hyatt, having given St. Louis three days of perfect sunshine, goes back to the dark ages Monday night or Tuesday.

"The showers may come, tonight," he said, "and he all over by Tuesday morning, so that Tuesday may be another fine day. It will be a little more of the same, but the showers, which began business at 58 degrees."

Dr. Hyatt's prediction of cooler weather is in line with a barometer coming down from the Rocky mountains and the North Pacific slope. Frost has been reported from Washington, Wyoming, Utah and Nevada. There have been heavy rains in New York and through all the southern and Atlantic coast states more or less downpour.

ENDED IN A FIGHT.

Ran Kowalski Was Stabbed in the Neck and the Niebeker Brothers Fled Toward St. Louis on a Train
—Scratch Gave Them Away.

Henry and John Niebeker were arrested on board the Reamont accommodation train of the Iron Mountain Railroad by Officers John W. Murphy and Dunn early Monday morning, and locked up in the Carondelet police station on a charge of murder.

They were arrested at the instance of the Bonne Terre, Mo., authorities, who telegraphed the St. Louis police that they were supposed to have headed this way. They are wanted there for the alleged murder of Ran Kowalski Sunday night. They were detected among the other passengers of one of the fresh scratch on the cheek.

Kowalski was killed while attending a drinking party at the home of John Papiasch, where a number of Hungarians had gathered for the purpose of having a good time. The men had a keg of beer and all of them became more or less intoxicated.

It is said that there had been ill-feeling for some time between John and Henry Niebeker, who were of the party, and Kowalski, over a board bill, and after the men were drunk in their cups the old story was dragged up again. Kowalski accused John Niebeker, with whom he boarded four months, of overcharging him. There was a dispute and blows were struck.

It is reported that Mrs. Patriarch slapped Niebeker's face and was struck in return. A riot immediately followed and Kowalski was stabbed to death. The Niebeker brothers were arrested and taken to the St. Louis police station. They deny that they committed the crime, but they claim that they simply defended themselves.

The men will be sent back to Bonne Terre.

COURTING BY "WORKING CARDS"

The Girl Clerks of St. Paul Keep Company With Union Men
Only.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 29.—The Young Women Clerks' Union have completed arrange- ments for the organization of a girls' league in which every member will pledge herself to marry "some" but a union man, and to refuse absolutely to receive at- tention from any but men with the "cards." The promoters of the new or- ganization are all firm believers in union- ism, and will do all they can to further the cause. The members will be single girls who are willing to marry "any" but the right.

He is 5 feet 8 inches in height. He weighs from 145 to 150 pounds. He has high cheekbones and a shallow complexion. His eyes are brown and dreamy when in repose. He has a drooping mustache, brown, tinged with gray. His manner is suave but firm. He has a pronounced chin, which transforms his face from that of a dreamer to a man of force and action. He is between 45 and 50 years old. He dresses in quiet taste, affecting black. His forehead is high and narrow with temples of concave form. His cheeks are hollow, accentuating the cheek bones. His figure is slightly drooped yet alert. His general appearance is that of a strong, reserved man, self-controlled, capable of influencing others by his poise and nervous vitality.

SYNOPSIS OF THE SNYDER CASE

The Snyder trial is the sole remnant left to justice of the greatest municipal scandal in the history of St. Louis—the Central Tracton deal.

On April 18, 1928, immediately after the passage by the City Council of the Central Tracton bill, the Post-Dispatch printed the facts relating to the distribution of $500,000 among members of the Council for their votes on the bill. These charges were generally published in St. Louis and throughout the United States, following the Post-Dispatch's exposure.

Eight of the councilmen whose votes for the Central Tracton bill were purchased were Carroll, Galt, Gaus, Kratz, Brinkmeyer, and Uthoff, who received not less than $10,000 each.

Uthoff will be the state's principal witness against Snyder. The story of the manner in which he was lured by the bill's promoter out of the $50,000 paid to him for his vote, of which he afterward recovered $30,000, has been told in the Post-Dispatch.

The passage of the bill through the House of Delegates over the mayor's veto was effected quietly. The delegates who voted for the measure were: Madera, Schumacher, Berach, Hartman, Gutke, Helms, Decker, Lehmann, E. E. Murrell and Robertson, all now under indictment for bribery and perjury in the Suburban and lighting deals; and Schuler, Judy, Wander, Sweeney, Hirth, Henning, Burke, King, Wicke, Willmore, Ritter, Dehrendt, Schuler, Watson and Wittenberg. Those who were bribed to vote for the bill received $3000 each. Those who did not vote for the bill were Pauley, Coudrey and Lloyd.

The bill was introduced in the House of Representatives and was then introduced in the Senate. It was then passed by the House of Representatives and then passed by the Senate. It was then signed by the Governor.

YESTERDAY SHE ATTENDED TWO CHURCH SERVICES.

Great Preparations Being Made for the Reception at Southern Tomorrow Night in Miss Gould's Honor.

BY ROSE MARION.

Sunday was a busy day for the guest that is Miss Helen Gould. She went to church both in the morning and evening and was accompanied by her sister, Miss Helen Gould. In the afternoon she had a drive in her car. She was accompanied by her sister, Miss Helen Gould. She was accompanied by her sister, Miss Helen Gould.

MANY ASKED FOR HER.

An extra force was necessary at the Grand Avenue Hotel Sunday, at which Miss Gould is stopping, to answer the curious by telephone. One wanted to know the length of her stay in the city, another desired to be informed upon the day she would leave the city. Those who just wanted to know anything that would be told them plus considerably more.

ALWAYS PUNCTUAL.

Punctuality is one of Miss Gould's principles and it is seldom that she keeps her carriage waiting as long as she did Monday morning—over a quarter of an hour. During the morning she called upon the Misses Warner at 5206 Washington boulevard.

Much preparation is being made at the Southern Hotel for the banquet of Tuesday night at which Miss Gould will be the guest of honor notwithstanding all the governors that will be present. The banquet will be given by the House of Representatives of said Congress and will be held in the grand ballroom of the hotel. The banquet will be given by the House of Representatives of said Congress and will be held in the grand ballroom of the hotel.

CAMPBELL HAS LEFT CHICAGO

Seemed Surprised When Informed That Subpoena Had Been Issued for Him by the Grand Jury.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—James Campbell, banker and broker, wanted in St. Louis to sell what he thought were two checks aggregating $47,500 which are connected with the boulder scandal there, has mysteriously disappeared from Chicago after remaining at the Auditorium Annex since Wednesday.

He left the hotel suddenly Sunday without saying where he was going. It is thought possible that he might have returned to St. Louis. He was accompanied by his wife.

Prior to his departure he was seen by the Post-Dispatch correspondent strolling about in the lobby of the Annex. He seemed to be looking at the clock and the watchman's clock.

SECOND ANNUAL HORSE PARADE

Event Will Take Place Oct. 18 on Lindell Boulevard.

The entry blanks for the second annual horse parade will be issued Tuesday—tomorrow, and the work of cataloging will begin at once.

The parade last year was one of the most attractive features of the season, and was instrumental in bringing about a sentiment in favor of horse and carriage racing.

This year the parade will take place Saturday afternoon, Oct. 18. The route will be along Lindell boulevard, King's highway and through Forest Park and will end with a cavalry drill by mounted police.

FINDING FOR PLAYING BALL

Principal of Divoll School Sued Pupil for Trespass.

James Johnson of 260 Stoddard street, a youth who played ball in Divoll school yard Sunday, was fined $10 by Judge Tracy in the Dayton street police court Monday.

Alfred Frederick Woodruff of Divoll school was named as complainant in the police court.

Johnson said he did not think it was any harm to use the public school yard as a playground.

Tailoring Top-Notcher

The two-button style cannot be gracefully made by any old tailor—it requires a greater equipment than a pair of scissors and a needle and thread.

That's why you see so many "sloppy"—and so few dressy, two-button sack suits.

But there's one thing upon which you can gamble anything from a last year bird's nest to a house and lot—and that is when you see a MacCarthy-Evans label you see snappily, stylishly, perfect-fitting, two-button sack. The best tailors that money can hire are here.

FAMOUS NOVELISTS ZOLA FOUND DEAD IN HIS HOUSE

The judges ruled that the witnesses would have to take the stand because they had been summoned, but if they did not care to testify that was their affair. After a long interval, Zola rose in the prisoner's dock and told the judges what he had to say. He said that he was a novelist and that he had written many novels. He said that he was a novelist and that he had written many novels.

Two hundred lawyers gathered at the door of the courtroom from all over the world. One of them was arrested, but his release was ordered at once.

The climax came when Zola arose and addressed a witness who was testifying. He said that he was a novelist and that he had written many novels. He said that he was a novelist and that he had written many novels.

THE MAN ZOLA

Zola was so much of a worshiper of the man of letters in the future, in which he submitted himself to the examination of a group of students of criminology, which included Lombroso, and permitted the publication of their report. Those who believe that I went away because of the financial life of the French capital, in 1892 "Le Debacle" appeared. This was the account of the Franco-Prussian war and the fall of the second empire.

WORK IN LITERATURE

Emile Zola was a son of an Italian engineer, born in 1850. He first appeared as a man of letters in the future, in which he submitted himself to the examination of a group of students of criminology, which included Lombroso, and permitted the publication of their report.

RUNAWAY ON BROADWAY.

Horse Was Stopped by William Schmaud of 2111 De Kalb Street.

A dark-bay horse, drawing an empty two-seated carriage went tearing north on Broadway shortly before 10 o'clock this morning.

When the animal was between Pine and Chestnut streets William Schmaud of Hill Dr. 2111 De Kalb street, who was driving a horse-drawn carriage, saw the runaway and grabbed the runaway by the bit.

After being dragged a short distance, he stopped the horse, which was then taken in charge by a policeman. To whom the horse belonged was not learned.

 set was begun last spring, and the prizes offered by the contest. Also to the parents and school teachers and $5 for the third best. In addition, the Engelmann Club offered diplomas, signed by Mayor Wells and Dr.
 director of Shaw's Garden, to all children who competed prizes. The object of the contest was to help on the making St. Louis more beautiful.

inners in the contest were: First prize, Allen Mohr of ry lane; second prize, Carrie Hedger of Ninth and La streets; third prize, Ada Chamberlin of 2929 Temple ave-stants being considered of equal merit.

anks are due to the committee of the Engelmann Botanical

 The American public will gladly accept the pronunciation of the name of the city of Missouri given by Prof. Soldan, that is, "St. Loui." The French pronunciation, of course, would be "St. Louis," but the town is American and not Latin, a circumstance for which the French people have reason to be grateful, considering the reign of boodling which has disgraced the town. Besides, the French pronunciation is a disgrace to the future. What is the effect upon mankind and womanhood in such communities?

 Rev. C. B. Wilmer, rector of St. Luke's Church, Atlanta, and secretary of the Committee for the Promotion of Child Labor Legislation in Georgia, makes this comment: "To take an able-bodied man off the farm where he must work and place him in a position to loaf back against his cottage and 'chaw tobacco' while his children support him—this is not only to treat children cruelly, but directly encourages and produces idleness, worthlesness and viciousness in a class of people in the South, most of all needing to be raised into something like true manhood—the poor whites."

It is a singular and suggestive fact that the New England capitalists who operate these mills are unable to employ child labor at home because of legal prohibition. Unhappily New England benevolence did not migrate South with New England capital.

The subject is comparatively new in the South where the people have had no experience in such problems. But there are signs of an awakening, and we may soon expect a determined effort to procure the needed legislation. Child labor was too costly for New England. It will be found too costly for the South.

The news that Mr. Roosevelt has suffered a slight relapse is not cheering, but there is no reason to anticipate serious consequences. The rise in temperature is inconsiderable and may not be due to inflammation in the wound. It would reassure the country, however, if the President's friends could induce him to rest until he is entirely recovered. Reports indicate that he frets under the disagreeable restraint. This, of course, is hurtful. Probably this is really all that ails him now, and it should excite no alarm. If he can be kept quiet for a few days, there is good reason to expect a rapid recovery. That is the hope of the nation. The President and his friends should realize the necessity for rest and quiet.

WHAT ABOUT THIS?
 The coal supply of the capitol at Washington is exhausted and the lawmakers and judges of the Supreme Court will have a cold time of it this winter.
 Isn't it edifying?

The business of a great nation of 70,000,000 people interrupted or hindered by a dispute between a labor organization and a group of gentlemen owning the anthracite supply of the country by divine grant!

Mr. Baer in his now famous letter to Mr. Clarke, acknowledged responsibility by divine appointment—for the welfare of the workmen.

But what about the government of the nation?
 If Congress is compelled to freeze or resort to imperfect and unsatisfactory fuel because Mr. Baer and the miners can't agree on the manner in which he shall discharge his divinely appointed duty to them, what shall be done about it?

Mr. Baer distinctly said that God had committed to him and his fellows the property interests of the country. If so, isn't he responsible for the welfare of all the people as well as the miners?
 And doesn't this include congressmen and Supreme Court justices?

Of course Mr. Baer can do what he wills with his own and he can therefore prevent the digging of coal. If without coal the people freeze, what's going to be done about it?

There is a question here affecting the preservation of the lives of the whole people. Is there no method by which the American people can be saved from freezing and starving on account of a dispute between the owners of the coal deposits and the miners of coal?

Mr. Baer and his associates are making this question acute.
 Boris is telling the old world what a marvelous country he found on this side of the ocean, and assuring his friends that he has passed the most exciting six weeks of his life in the United States. When the Europeans hear all that Boris has to say they will surely try to get in the rush to the World's Fair.

It is asserted that the American boy is not so thorough as the boy of Germany, who takes much more time to study business methods and trades and speaks more than one language. He thus finds it easier to obtain and keep employment than the American.
 Let every American boy look into this at once.

It is said that in Utah wives have been Republicans, husbands

Should Emperor William succeed in his efforts to abolish extravagance and vice in his army it is to be hoped he may not die without leaving a diagram of his scheme.

Just Minute
 WITH THE POST-DISPATCH
 POET AND PHILOSOPHER.

HOLDING A JOB.
 If holding a job were the whole of life,
 Oh, wouldn't it be a wearisome thing,
 And wouldn't we tire of the noise and strife,
 Feeling the fetters that gall and sting?

What is a job,
 That we should throng
 With fear lest the thing get by us?
 If men are men,
 As they should be, then
 No earthly power can a place deny us.

Love is more than the beat of job,
 And friendship is more than pay.
 And a job that bids in a way that robs
 A man of his peace all day
 Is a sorry thing,
 Be he cook or king.

If it makes him a mere factotum,
 What is a job?
 Let comrades join
 Till the tears they shed would float 'em!

We Own Up.
 A lady poet, who, said to say, seems to have suggested to read the newspapers of late, says in writing on "Our Blessed Land"
 for "Our Magazine":

Our women? They are angels in the land.
 Their ideas are the good and true;
 They seek the right for country and self,
 And, like the blessed land, are blessed too.

Such a lack of sophistication (as well as such a lack of meter in the second line and of perspicuity in the third) would be amusing if it were not so distressing.
 It is all right to praise one's native land,
 and we are glad to see the laudus burst forth "in profuse strains of unpremeditated art," like Mr. Shelley's skylark, yet we are forced to admit, judging from this sample of patriotic verse, that it might be better for all hands concerned if the ladies could moderate a little prior to bursting forth. What does our fair friend mean when she says that our men "seek the right for country and for self?"

If they seek the right for their country, they seek it for themselves; And if they seek it for themselves, they seek it for their country? Is it actually in record that they are seeking it at all?

Much as it grieves us to admit it, there are mighty few men in this "blessed land" who are "blessed" too. Of course, there is J. Pierpont Morgan, who is fairly based up and running over with patriotism, but the rest of us, we blush to say, are a sorry lot, much given to toil, and thinking of lucre rather than of liberty.

A Thought for the Day.

 we "have no rugans." But look at our city treasury.

J. Pierpont Morgan was named for his relative, John Pierpont, one of the early American poets, but there would be no poetry in the name of J. P. M. had his say about it, unless there was "something in it."

POST-DISPATCH ACHIEVEMENT
 Comments of the Press on the Importance to the Country of the Boodle Exposure.

From the Baltimore (Md.) News.
 It would look as though municipal lawmakers will be open to the same sort of temptation while they have such valuable public rights to give away, and unscrupulous business men are willing to become partners with villainous official traitors in looting the public. A more active business and official conscience is badly needed. In the meantime, city councilors should be deprived of the power of giving away public privileges without let or check.

From the Los Angeles (Cal.) Herald.
 The citizens of St. Louis have only themselves to blame for the disgrace that has fallen upon their proud city. Eternal vigilance is the price of honest and faithful municipal government, as well as of liberty. If the people of a city, particularly its business men, fail in the plain duty of safeguarding municipal business it will not be strange if public offices become sinks of corruption.

In this matter of municipal management the good old rule applies that "prevention is better than cure." If the voters of a city will merely follow plain business principles, by selecting for public offices only men unquestionably worthy of the trust, municipal affairs will run as amply and satisfactorily as the affairs of any well managed private or corporate business.

From the Columbus (O.) Press.
 Is it not high time that some sort of the law be passed, that no public official should be allowed to play the part of a and the drinking of a bottle of beer, should open their eyes to these highest of all crimes, the bribery of city councils, and the jury-fixing by corporation attorneys,
 at the behest and solicitation of corporation capitalists whose wives and daughters pose as the "best society?" Let the preachers go to the root of things. Let the state legislature and the national congress declare that bribe-taking and "bribe-giving" shall constitute the high crime of treason. Let the public be educated by the school teachers, the preachers, and the newspaper proprietors who put characters above dollars, that Benedict Arnold was a gentleman compared with the so-called "best citizen" who puts up a bribe for the weak and cowardly member of the city council, or the low-minded member of a jury, who is so cowardly and so self-conscious of his helplessness to prepare bread and meat for an honorable way, as to be ready and anxious to have his hands befouled with the filth of a bribe.

KAISER WILHELM'S EPIGRAMS.
 Most people know that the German Emperor is given to epigram, but few persons know just how far his tendency has developed, says the Philadelphia Press. An enterprising British journalist has collected the following aphorisms from the Kaiser's stock:

A law is the expression of the accumulat-

 Commerce has become a passion, just as

A Flower From My Mother's Grave.
 I've a casket at home that is filled
 With the precious gems
 I have pictures of friends dear to me,
 I have trinkets so rare that I came
 years ago
 From far distant homes across the sea,
 But there's one little treasure that I ever dearly prize
 Better far than all the wealth beneath the earth.
 Though a small faded flower that I plucked in childhood days
 'Tis a flower from my angel mother's grave.

CHORUS.
 Treasured in memory, like a happy dream
 Are the loving words she gave,
 And my heart fondly clings to the dry
 Of a flower from my angel mother's grave.

In the quiet country churchyard they laid
 her down to rest:
 Close beside the home, she's at rest,
 And the low, sacred mound is sheltered within my heart.
 By the sweet ties of love forever bound,
 In the still and silent night I often dream
 of home again.
 And the vision tells me to be brave,
 For the last thing that binds me to that place I love so well
 Is the flower from my angel mother's grave.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE POST-DISPATCH.

"How Could I Know?"
 To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
 Will any of the many readers of the Post-Dispatch be surprised to find the poem entitled "How Could I Know?"
 begins something like
 "I was a flower from my angel mother's grave, and I knew that when I stepped out of my grave I should be a flower from my angel mother's grave."
 How could I know?

DEFIED A JUGGERNAUT.
 T. J. Heath, auditor of passenger accounts for the Pacific Railway, vouches for the truth of this story, which is narrated as he told it.
 "I had just reached the sidewalk in front of the Union Station Saturday morning when I noticed an elderly gentleman
 of a broadside County
 appearance ambling
 across the street and lifting somewhat to starboard. He carried a rather heavy cargo of exuberant spirits and failed to observe a Laodela
 avenue car bearing down upon him until the motorman yelled:
 "Get out of the way, you black-
 and-blank!"

The old fellow looked up and then made an 8-foot leap to the sidewalk. When he landed on the sidewalk, he turned and, extending his hand and shaking it slowly,
 "How's the throat?" he asked quite pleasantly.

 an end, when he met the surgeon on the parade ground. He saluted and the doctor recognized him.

A Crisis in St. Louis Politics.
 To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
 My hearty congratulations for the stand you have taken relative to the judgeship of the Court of Criminal Correction. So imperative is the need of an honest, capable man in this situation that such a one should be placed there regardless of the post. So far as my information goes, and I have had exceptional opportunity to learn, it is a sinkhole of corruption and a nursery for crime. It would be far bet

A DISEASE OF CIVILIZATION

SAYS THAT NO HARD AND FAST RULE CAN BE LAID DOWN.

SOME ARGUMENTS FOR IT

Man Who Takes His Life to Believe Others May Do an Unselfish Deed.

Pulpit discussion of suicide, started by the resolutions of the Cloth Club on the death of Mrs. Addie M. Johnson, was continued Sunday by Rev. W. F. Peck, pastor of the Church of Spiritual Unity.

Rev. Mr. Peck declared that while suicide was, in the great majority of cases, absolutely unjustifiable, no hard and fast rule could be laid down for all cases.

"Neither medical authority or Scripture texts can absolutely settle the question," Mr. Peck declared.

"Suicide is peculiarly a disease of civilization, being virtually unknown to savages. Is this a cause of cause and effect? Do learning and culture create discontent and uneasiness of mind? Is it not conceivable that a man who takes his life by violence to relieve others of a burden may be given credit for an unselfish deed in the final allotment, even though he was mistaken in his surmises?"

"First—Life to me is naught but suffering. Second—Death ends all suffering, therefore. Third—I will seek death."

The mistake, he declared, lies in the assumption that death ends suffering.

"The giving of one's life for others has always been regarded as the high-water mark of unselfish virtue."

"Is it not conceivable that a man who takes his life by violence to relieve others of a burden may be given credit for an unselfish deed in the final allotment, even though he was mistaken in his surmises?"

"THE STORKS" IS FULL OF LAUGHS AND IS A WORTHY SUCCESSOR TO "THE BURGOMASTER" ALSO IN TOWN

POST-DISPATCH CARICATURIST SEES THE STORKS

BY A POST-DISPATCH POET. (In a new role)

The Storks are birds, there's no denying. And of their fame you must have heard. As sprightly and electrifying As the Post-Dispatch's Weather Bird. You cannot keep from laughing At all their merry chaffing. There is no use in trying. When once your risibilities are stirred.

They flew in, Or blew in From in or near Chicago's prairies. With all their quips and mad vagaries. To tickle us with folly's feather And make us laugh with lungs of leather. And ribs elastic. At their fantastic. Gags. And at their mirth, which never lags. Drags. Or sags.

There's Richard Carle, Who has more antics than a bar! Of monkeys. With half a dozen sad-faced funkeys. And make us grin (With malice) uglier than sin). Your affectionate. And fill us full of pleasant recollections. Of the past, and almost make you miss connections. With your breath. And laugh yourself to death.

Birds of a feather Are these Storks, taken all together And woven into a plot. They'll make you laugh, and laugh good. Whether You want to laugh or not. They're hot stuff! (Don't miff The joke). These folk Are birds. Words Fail to express, by far. How good they are.

INTERPOLATION BY MR. CARLE. I said bird-hot stuff. Birds. Scuffed. I repeat I said bird-hot stuff-hot stuffed birds. (Pause of three seconds.) A-a-a! right! When those around him fall to see The indecent brilliancy Of all his jokes. (There are some folks Who cannot see.) But he Accommodatingly Will quietly elucidate the same for ye. And do his little act of grammaring With no unnecessary noise or d-d-d. As is the usual Plan of the bum comedian to amuse you all. Then, too, there's Gilbert Gregory. Who ran with Carle a kind of storkish caddy In the wood. And found themselves one big egg to the good. Reduced to beggary.

By his wife's mad penchant for patent medicine.

(Was what he said a sin?) This Gregory Was truly a sad-visaged wight. With half the color of a locomotive's light. With face as solemn As a Corinthian column—Well, in a word, He is a bird. Of course you'll see him. Better go tonight.

There's Malzadoc and Henrico And Flaxlewitz, Lirbolio And several more. And girls so many in a row That you can hardly count them. Oh, There surely never was a show That had such shapely beauties! No Appreciative wight can go And gaze upon them and not glow With joy and satisfaction. So It's up to you. To get a view.

INTERPOLATION NO. 2 BY MR. CARLE. He said "Do you like Limburger?" I said "scat." Limburger—scat. I repeat. Limburger—scat. (Pause of three seconds.) A-a-a! right! "What is 'The Storks'?" you ask of me. "I do not know," I answer ye. "Where is the scene?" I cannot say. "Has it a plot?" No—please—day. Yet clever 'tis, and bright and gay. With tuneful songs and merry jest And 'doings' till you cannot rest. The whole performance, in a word, Is absurd. Yet 'tis a bird. As you have probably inferred. Like the mirthful music of "The Storks."

The Imperial Theater was packed to the doors last night with an enthusiastic and satisfied audience. If constant applause is a sign of entire approbation. The attraction, a new one here, is a rip-roaring melodrama of a new type entitled, "Her Marriage Vow," by Owen Davis. The chief characters are those who are to be found earning their daily bread on any railroad in the country, and consequently they are of such a nature and possess such characteristics as find ready sympathy with the theatergoer. The story deals with Kate Walters, the daughter of a railroad engineer, whose downfall is attempted by the villainous son

LET NATURE HONE YOUR RAZOR PAIR WHO ELOPED FORGIVEN

San Francisco Man Patents Device to Keep Blades Sharp by Magnetism. Love Feast, a Sunday Dinner, Given Them by the Bride's Mother, Mrs. J. M. Alexander.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—One of the queerest patents ever granted has just been placed on record by a San Francisco man. He thinks he has found a way in which the razor or the input man may have a sharp razor without breaking his back in stropping it. He proposes to do it by magnetism.

His proposition is that if a magnet is kept alongside the cutting edge of a razor or any other fine edged tool the teeth will be drawn out by magnetic force so that the edge will be comparatively even and much sharper.

In order that a man may not forget to put the edge of his razor against a magnet the inventor has contrived a bar magnet that is to be placed within one side of the ordinary razor handle so that the cutting edge will be in contact with the bar all the time the razor is in use.

The young couple announced the marriage to Mrs. Alexander at midnight Saturday by telephone.

Mrs. Alexander was not opposed to Mr. Leland personally, but she did not want to part with her only daughter and for that reason discouraged the idea of marriage. But after the deed was done she forgave her daughter and her son-in-law. Mr. and Mrs. Leland will likely live in St. Louis.

HAAS ASKS ANNULLMENT

Says a Decree of Divorce Was Granted His Wife Without His Knowing It.

On the ground that a decree of divorce was granted to his wife at a time when he was not aware that a suit was pending, Henry E. Haas, clerk of the Wyoming Street Police Court, filed a motion Monday morning for the setting aside of the decree granted June 14 last.

Mrs. Rose V. Haas, who secured the divorce, filed the suit Sept. 20, 1901. Her former husband says in his petition, filed by Attorney Ben Clark, that after that time they became reconciled and she assumed to be his wife. He says that the divorce was granted, he says, he supposed that the suit had been withdrawn. Allegations of cruelty furnished the ground for the divorce. Judge Ferriss has set next Monday for the time for hearing Haas' petition.

Mrs. Mayhew has been playing the part so long that it has become almost second nature to her, and her work is the source of nature's Katharine Miller is the blind girl this season and plays the part well. Two large audiences witnessed its production yesterday.

Johnstone Bennett & Co. are the headliners on the new bill which goes on at the Columbia this afternoon. There is also a good list of minor attractions.

The Topsy Turvy Burlesquers started the fun at the Standard yesterday with "Champagne Charlie," a lively sketch, and closed after an excellent bill of specialties, with a burlesque on "Foxy Grandpa." It has also been seen at the Standard this season. The vudeville turns are especially good.

"The Burgomaster," at the Century this week illustrates a musical comedy does not have to grow old, provided the dust is carefully brushed away from the wings of its plot. It is a comedy of the employed and the scenery not allowed to lapse into decay. This is the way in which "The Burgomaster" has been handled and accounts for its ability to draw a good house on the night of its production.

The Burgomaster is played by Fred Lennox, who hasn't an impressive dialect, but who undeniably catches on and

It is the right of every child to be well born, and to the parents it must look for health and happiness. How inconceivably great is the parents' responsibility, and how important that no taint of disease is left in the blood to be transmitted to the helpless child, entailing the most pitiable suffering, and marking its little body with offensive sores and eruptions, catarrh of the nose and throat, weak eyes, glandular swellings, brittle bones, white swelling and deformity.

How can parents look upon such little sufferers and not reproach themselves for bringing so much misery into the world? If you have any disease lurking in your system, how can you expect well developed, healthy children? Cleanse your own blood and build up your health, and you have not only enlarged your capacity for the enjoyment of the pleasures of life, but have discharged a duty all parents owe to posterity, and made mankind healthier and happier.

There is no remedy that so surely reaches deep-seated, stubborn blood troubles as S. S. S. It searches out even hereditary poisons, and removes every taint from the blood, and builds up the general health. If weaklings are growing up around you, right the wrong by putting them on a course of S. S. S. at once. It is a purely vegetable medicine, harmless in its effects, and can be taken by both old and young without fear of any bad results.

Write us about your case, and let our physicians advise and help you. This will cost you nothing, and we will also send our book on blood and skin diseases.

PARENTS FOUND SON HANGING

William Fismar, a Young Witness Carpenter, Ended Life.

ILL HEALTH WAS THE CAUSE

BODY DISCOVERED DANGLING FROM RAFTER IN ATTIC.

William Fismar, a young carpenter, was found hanging to a rafter in the attic of his home, 5748 Kennerly avenue, at 3 o'clock Monday morning. He died from strangulation and was cut down by his mother and father, who made the discovery.

Fismar had been ill for some time, and it is supposed he was deranged when he took his life. He and his father occupied the same bed in the downstairs front room. The old man slept soundly, but Mrs. Fismar thought she heard the young man stirring about the room twice during the night. She was in the next room, however, and after seeing him apparently asleep at mid- night, retired to her bed and heard no more until she was aroused by her husband about 3 o'clock. He had awakened through some unaccountable cause, and saw that he was the only occupant of the room.

The couple searched the house for their son and upon reaching the attic saw him hanging to a clothesline which had been securely tied to a rafter above. They cut the cord and carried the inanimate form downstairs, laying it in the bed he had occupied during the night.

Dr. Fitzpatrick of 533 Easton avenue was called, but his services were not needed. He said the boy had been dead for about an hour, and had died from strangu- lation. The cause of the death was not as- signed for the action is that Fismar was temporarily deranged.

SUICIDE AFTER QUARREL

Frantina to End Life. A quarrel with his wife over money mat- ters is believed to have figured in the sui- cide of Frank Frantina, a molder, who shot himself through the heart at his home, 1833 South, at 8 o'clock Sunday evening.

Mrs. Frantina says there was a disagree- ment about three weeks ago, and she be- lieves this may have led to the suicide. She was out at the time of the shooting. Joseph Frantina, a son, was in the house. He heard the shot and rushed to his father's room. Frantina was dead when the boy found him.
